

Using Runtime Data Mapping to Access Trigger and Action Results

In Flux, almost all triggers and actions return some kind of result. This result might contain information about the flow context execution itself (a Timer Trigger result that indicates whether the trigger has expired) or it might contain data that you want to use later in the workflow (a File Exist Trigger result containing information about the files that were located).